

MEET THE WOMEN WHO MAKE YOUR CLOTHES

—SOLE proudly presents—

SONIA BEATRIZ LARA AND EVA NERIO PONCE

Sonia Beatriz Lara and Eva Nerio Ponce, Salvadoran maquila workers, have been invited to the United States to tell their stories to university students and other U.S. people concerned with the violation of human and workers rights in factories producing clothing for the U.S.

Sonia and Eva are both single mothers. Both have worked in the production of well-know U.S. labels and also in a factory that produces t-shirts destined for U.S. universities. Both were fired and blacklisted for meeting, for talking about working conditions in their factories, for wanting to organize a union.

— plus —

CHARLES KERNAGHAN

Firebrand Orator, Sweatshop Detective,
National Labor Committee Director

— the world premier of —

SOMETHING TO HIDE

the brand new video from USAS and the NLC! See exactly what student delegates from U.S. universities found when they toured factories in which brand name and collegiate apparel are made.

— and the unveiling of the —

WORKER RIGHTS CONSORTIUM

United Students Against Sweatshops' plan to enforce anti-sweatshop codes of conduct at U-M and across the country.

WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 20 7:00PM

ROOM 100 LAW SCHOOL