We felt justified in inviting only those who opposed American policy as main speakers on three grounds: First, we wanted not only to protest but to protest the enlargement of the war. Second, there is much disagreement within our group. Some of us advocate withdrawal, some reject only the war's enlargement and have virtually every position written by two of those points of view was represented. There was plenty to discuss and debate. Third, we were unimpressed by the argument that every conceivable or every influential or influential point of view must be represented. At the National Teach-In 27 points of