STUDENTS FOR A DEMOCRATIC SOCIETY

119 Fifth Ave., New York 3, N.Y.
The Peace Research and Education Project was established in January, 1963, by Students for a Democratic Society. It was founded with the belief that alternatives to international conflict can be effectively realized only if:

 peaceful alternatives are coupled with the factual knowledge and technical skills necessary to implement them;
 alternatives are systematically and actively expressed by men in the context of their legitimate social roles;
 important institutions in our society begin to think and plan beyond the norms and practices of the cold war.

The Peace Research and Education Project was established to initiate this process on the university campus. It encourages this process by stimulating the following programs:

1. Student participation in peace research projects. Although some faculty personnel are beginning to undertake peace related research, few students are currently involved in this endeavor. Students can participate in connection with their programs of study, via co-curricular activities, or as volunteer helpers on faculty projects.

2. Student participation in formal and informal seminars and courses oriented to problems of peace and war. Few university courses currently undertake these problems for serious study. Students can participate by instituting new courses within the curriculum, re-orienting sections of related courses, or establishing informal non-credit seminars.

The Peace Research and Education Project attempts to contribute to the development of student research and educational activities by:

---collecting, developing, and publishing ideas and reports of student peace research;
---collecting, developing, and publishing course outlines, bibliographies and evaluations;
---initiating and participating in conferences and meetings devoted to issues of peace research and education;
---publishing a Student Peace Research Newsletter to be widely distributed to interested campuses, organizations, and individuals.

In order to be successful in the fulfillment of these aims, the Peace Research and Education Project needs the cooperation of like-minded individuals and organizations on local campuses. The Project needs information and suggestions concerning courses, research ideas and reports, and local liaison. Please direct all responses and requests for information or materials to:

Special Collections Library Duplication Services

The Special Collections Library generates copies of materials to facilitate research and for use/reproduction in scholarly and other products. Duplication may also serve preservation purposes where appropriate.

While the University of Michigan owns the objects in our collections, we do not own copyright to these materials (except where it has been explicitly transferred to the University).

Duplication Policies
Our staff can provide each registered user with up to 100 images/scans/pages from our materials per calendar month. Delivery of straight-forward requests can be expected within two weeks, and will often be delivered within less time. If your request is more complicated, our staff will get in touch and fulfillment might take more than two weeks.

Requests for any type of duplication are evaluated by staff and approved based on material format, physical condition and any applicable restrictions.

Use, Copyright, and Attribution
The University of Michigan Library is committed to supporting research, teaching, scholarship, publication, and artistic production involving use of the Library's collections. Toward this end, the Library provides copies of material to facilitate research or to be used/reproduced in scholarly and other products. There is no fee for this use. However, we do ask that you notify us of these uses when they involve the publication or distribution of reproductions of material in print or digital form.

Upon receiving this notification, we, as owners of the physical item, can provide you with a letter acknowledging this use. This helps us understand and facilitate the work our collections support, and gives us the opportunity to provide you with the best citation for the material you are using. Complete citations will vary in content and format according to the material being used, but all captions, citations, etc. should include the credit line/attribution “University of Michigan Library (Special Collections Library).”

Our letter of acknowledgement does not convey any copyright permission. It is the sole responsibility of the author, editor, web editor, publisher, etc. to investigate the copyright status of any given work and to seek and obtain permission where needed. Copyright law protects unpublished as well as published materials. If the content in question is under copyright, permission to publish must be sought from the owners of the rights, typically the creator or the heirs to his or her estate, unless the intended use of the material is protected by the fair use provision of the copyright law of the United States (title 17, United States Code). For more information about fair use and copyright law, see the “NOTICE WARNING” below and the University of Michigan Library Copyright Statement.

NOTICE WARNING CONCERNING COPYRIGHT RESTRICTIONS

The copyright law of the United States (Title 17, United States Code) governs the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or reproduction is not to be “used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research.” If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of “fair use,” that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copying order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of copyright law.
