Will you help? House Bill 3055 needs your help now. This bill has been called by many one of the most important pieces of legislation on conservation to be introduced in the Michigan legislature for many years. House Bill 3055 would permit the attorney general, local governments and private citizens to bring suit when natural resources or the environment may be jeopardized for whatever reason. The party bringing the complaint would have to show that there was reasonable cause to believe that injury was being done the public interest.

Any threat to business or industry would exist only if it were acting in flagrant disregard of the public interest -- in which case it ought to be threatened. Powerful opposition is quietly growing in legislative halls to this legislation. Some arguments against H.B. 3055 say that the proposed law is not needed or that industry would be harassed by crank suits or that the operation and growth of business and industry would be threatened. We say that the continued deterioration of the environment is proof that H.B. 3055 is needed. H. B. 3055 will give a tool to the citizen to start fighting polluting practices.
